Center to observe moment of silence at noon Friday

During NASA Administrator Dan Goldin's message on Thursday, he stated that the Agency will observe a day of prayer and remembrance on Friday for the victims who died or were injured, and their families who are suffering as a result of the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, D.C. As part of our day of remembrance, at noon Friday, the Center will observe a moment of silence for the victims and their families. Following the moment of silence, supervisors are encouraged to set aside about 30 minutes for employees to get together in conference rooms or other areas to discuss and express their thoughts and feelings about the events of this week.
